

Honeys:

Abella

The name “Abella” translates to “bee” in Gallego, the language spoken in Galicia, Spain, where this pure, all-natural honey is produced. Each honey is handcrafted using traditional, artisanal methods in the company’s remote apiaries, fully embraced by thick woodlands. The Abella Specialty Honey Collection showcases three unique blends, which include royal jelly, pollen, and propolis.

Dolce Alveare

Nestled into the eastern slope of Mount Etna, the quaint village of Zafferana Etnea overlooks the sparkling blue waters of the Ionian Sea. The hilly landscape is covered with citrus orchards, as well as clusters of chestnut trees and colorful wildflowers. Dolce Alveare produces single blossom honeys that showcase this vibrant variety of seasonal flowers, which include thyme, eucalyptus and orange blossom. These fragrant honeys are thick and rich in consistency, with a sweet, fruity finish.

Franca Franzoni

Located just south of Florence, in the Chianti region of Italy, Franca Franzoni's farm is painted with the brilliant blossoms of wildflowers, as well as acacia and chestnut trees. Franca carefully plans the foraging paths for her bees, ensuring the purity and superior quality of her product. Each honey has clean and distinct floral flavors, with a luxuriously thick consistency.

Il Miele della Vita

The honeys from Il Miele della Vita (The Honey of Life) by Michele Gaido reflect the natural beauty of Val Grande National Park, tucked beneath the slopes of the Italian Alps. This pristine environment is scattered with dense forests and vibrant fields of blossoming wildflowers, where bees roam freely to produce a unique and diverse assortment of honeys. Varieties range from delicate, golden yellow acacia honey to deep and earthy, caramel-colored chestnut honey.
